Ever break down on a Georgia highway? More help is on the way

David Wickert

Updated February 7, 2017 Filed in Georgia, Georgia Department of Transportation, HB 170, I-20, I-75, I-85, road safety.

Georgia today unveiled new safety and maintenance patrols to help stranded motorists and clean debris from interstate highways.

The Coordinated Highway Assistance & Maintenance Program (CHAMP) launches today in northeast Georgia. By May it will serve most interstate highways across Georgia outside of the Atlanta area. The exception: short stretches of I-24 and I-59 in northwest Georgia.

The patrols are similar to the Highway Emergency Response Operators (HERO) units familiar to Atlanta drivers. The HERO units patrol 310 miles of metro Atlanta freeways, assisting motorists and clearing roads

"I was just doing my job," 25-year-old Palmetto resident says.

By Dale White

MANATEE COUNTY -- As a member of the Road Ranger Service Patrol for the Florida Department of Transportation, Palmetto resident Matthieu Widner routinely helps drivers with disabled vehicles on Interstate 75.

On Friday, however, the 25-year-old former tow truck driver found himself on a more urgent, life-

Travelers Say Thank You to HEROs

September 20, 2016

I want to say a big Thank you to the HERO unit.. My daughter was on 285 when her tailpipe fell and started dragging. She pulled over but didn't know what to do. My Geico roadside assistance was of no help and it was gonna be a while until her father could get there. The HERO unit came, helped her out and she was on her way. Thank you so much. You made two very worried parents feel so much better.

What a great service.

How does MoDOT Equipment Tech Darrin Johnson keep our trucks on the road? Find out more about Darrin in this featured article from the Jefferson City News Tribune and the Fulton Sun !

Keeping highway crews on the road

Darrin Johnson credits his love of working on engines with helping him get involved with the Missouri Department of Transportation (MoDOT) — and eventually working for the department as a mechanic in Callaway County.
